Don't fail to attend the school entertainment Friday night.

A couple of cars were smashed in a wreck at Hogan last Sunday.

Potatoes in the neighborhood of $2 a bushel renders them almost a luxury.

Rev. T. A. Bowman of Fredericktown filled the pulpit at the Baptist Church Sunday morning.

Somehow, the coloring of the forest leaves is not pleasant to look upon this year. There is no life to it.

Prof. W. C. Ogier took his Biology class to the Iron Mountain dam Saturday afternoon, in search of material for examination in the regular class work. They succeeded in securing a large number of fine specimens.

To friend Warren Johnson we are again indebted for some samples of fruit from his farm—apples and pears. Just how he managed to raise such fine fruit this season is a problem; but his success is evidenced by results.

Wm. Belcher was arraigned in Squire Fairchild's court Tuesday charged with having disturbed the peace of Mrs. Sam. Whitehead in Arcadia the night before. He pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $1 and costs.

Mr. B. B. Reagan will, within a few days, take up his permanent residence in Ironton. His family is now domiciled in the property purchased from the editor several months ago. Mr. R. will be an acceptable acquisition to the town.

It is rumored hereabouts that James L. Brioner, erstwhile our genial night operator, but now in the employ of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company in Alabama, is about to take unto himself a better half. Our congratulations and best wishes, Jim.

An artesian well in this town? O, no! That would disrupt the even order of things, and maybe lead up to other useless and expensive luxuries which we have done without for half a century. These things once begun, the end is out of sight!

Memorial exercises were held in Ironton on the day of President McKinley's funeral. The band and a number of citizens went to the railroad and there meeting with the troops from the range, marched to the Academy of Music, where addresses were made by Revs. Steel and Waterman. Most of the buildings on Main street were draped with flags at half mast and emblems of mourning were on every side. The business houses remained closed during the day.

Barney Murray of Graniteville last week filed suit in the Circuit Court here against A. J. Sheahan for $5,000 damages for personal injuries received while at work in Sheahan's quarry near Graniteville about a year ago. W. P. Clark and J. F. Green represent the plaintiff and Mr. Edgar has been retained by the defendant.

Next Sunday being what is known as the feast of St. Michael and all angels, the order of services at St. Paul's Church will correspond. A sermon will be delivered in the morning on the ministry of angels. In the evening the subject will be "What does the Episcopal Church stand for?" Hours of worship at 11 and 7:30. Everybody welcome at all times.

Last Monday another allotment of soldiers came to the Rifle Range. There are about one hundred and fifty men in the detachment, commanded by First Lieut. Boyd. Lieutenants Henry and Moeen and Dr. Leeper are with them. They will remain at the Range two or three weeks, when they will be succeeded by two other troops. Those here now are of the 4th Cavalry, fresh from the Philippines.

A special train of two coaches Sunday brought about one hundred and fifty of the wholesale druggists from St. Louis to the Valley. The party went out to Schneider's quarry from Iron Mountain and looked at the big rocks and mountains of granite. They reached the Valley about two o'clock and dinner was served by Mrs. Biemel on the Arcadia hotel grounds. The train started on the return trip at five o'clock.

It is reported that Tom Hall, who lives in the west end of this county was shot and killed, just across the line in Dent county, one day the past week. In July, 1900, Hall killed one James Sher. He was tried therefor at the October term of Circuit Court last year, found guilty of murder in the second degree and given a sentence of ten years in the penitentiary. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court and Hall released on bond. It is supposed that he was killed by some of Asher's friends. The shot was fired from ambush.

A friend encloses the following clipping taken from the Green Bag, published in Boston, Massachusetts: "Oddities in legal papers are of frequent occurrence, but the following verbatim copy of a return has features of its own that are rarely found. 'Excoated the within subpoena in Reynolds, Mo., on the day of — by going to river. The river was up and couldn't get across. The canoe was on the other side. — Sheriff.' This return was actually made by the sheriff of Reynolds county on a subpoena returnable to the Iron County Circuit Court." Our friend in commenting on the clipping says "this is much like an Arkansas sheriff."

Last Saturday evening a small party—the Budweiser Bandits and other half-dozen Vallegians—called at "The Maples," the newly finished elegant residence of Mr. C. N. Jones. He was "at home" to us, received us cordially, and entertained us most hospitably—abundantly assisted by our old-time friend, Herman Kretschmar, Esq. Among the persons there, were Messrs. Thomson and White of St. Louis and the Valley, and the evening's pleasures were by no means abated because of their presence. For two short hours, music, brass, string and vocal story, jest and jibe with, maybe, "a little on the side"—prevailed, when "an revoir" was said, and, safely guided by Luna's kindly light, home we wended.

Rev. R. W. Mason and bride returned Wednesday from a month's tour through the Western States that included Lake Geneva, Cincinnati, Pueblo, Leadville and Salida, Colorado. Rev. Mason's friends were preparing to tender Mrs. Mason and him a reception on their return but the plans were brought to a standstill by the announcement that Rev. Mason would resign the pastorate of the Presbyterian church. He has accepted a call to St. Paul, Minn., and as soon as his pastoral relations here are dissolved, will leave for that place where he and his bride will make their future home. Rev. Mason will begin his work in Salida sometime in the early part of October.—De Soto Press.

Memorial exercises were observed Thursday at St. Paul's Church which had been put in good order by the ladies and appropriately decorated with flags and portraits, the chancel rail and pulpit being draped in mourning. The memorial hymns were sung, a variation of America being sung as a processional. Following the general custom of the Episcopal clergy, there was no political reference but the oring of the lawfully constituted civil authority so customary in this church was followed and the personal purity of life as universally admitted of the deceased was commended as an example for all, his integrity as a soldier and civilian being set forth amidst the well known temptations of both army and official life. An example of entire submission to God in all life's charges was drawn and commended. The burial office was followed in part. After the Lord's prayer and benediction the exercises were closed by the chanting of the nunc dimittis, "Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace." A large congregation was present notwithstanding the threatening weather and exercises elsewhere.

The commissioners appointed to assess damages against the Missouri Southern railroad in favor of M. R. & B. T. for crossings at Flat River and Elvins has been in session since Tuesday morning, and all the influence of the Missouri Pacific's combined roads, with its general attorney heading the fight, is being used to keep out of the Missouri Southern. The M. R. & B. T. has gridironed the whole Flat River district with switch roads to the mines, and is now claiming that it would be dangerous for any road to cross in that vicinity. The object is to force the Missouri Southern to build an overhead crossing, which would prove so expensive as to defeat the construction of the road, and cause the promoters to abandon the enterprise altogether. The opposition to the Missouri Southern has secured expert witnesses to uphold its contention of danger risks if another road is permitted to cross the M. R. & B. T. Railroad Commissioner Hennessy, ex-Commissioner Joe Flory, and alleged experts from numerous places are here to testify presumably in a way to uphold this contention. A decision against the Missouri Southern would be serving notice on all railroad enterprises that promise to compete in any way with the M. R. & B. T. and the Iron Mountain railroads, to keep out, and leave the people to their mercy in the matter of coal and freight. Public sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of the Missouri Southern, the contention of the opposing railroads is unusual and the commissioners should do their duty regardless of other influence.—Farmingington Times.

HOME SKETCHES.

No man may deliberately violate the rule of right without doing himself the greatest wrong. Cruelty and oppression spring from unrestrained power as naturally as does from the noxious air of darkened swamp and fen. The power of the master over the slave was practically unlimited, and it bred evil enough to the land; yet custom and the laws enacted for very shame's sake exercised some restraint upon the one and gave the semblance of protection to the other. I am not prepared to dispute Col. Lindsay's assertion that, even in slavery under civilized control, the negro was better than in his savage state in his native land; but this I do know, that for every inch the slave was raised in the scale of manhood, the white master descended on all proportion. The wrong of slavery lay at the door of the white man, and grievously did he pay for it—nor is the end yet.

In the summer of 1857 two negroes belonging to a prominent citizen in this county broke bounds and ran away, and, after the trials and adventures incident to such ventures, crossed the river and landed on the free soil of Illinois. They were of course vigorously pursued with gun and hound, but when word came back that the broad Mississippi lay between them and their pursuers, it was generally concluded that two more "free niggers" had been added to the population of the Union. "Excoated the within subpoena in Reynolds, Mo., on the day of — by going to river. The river was up and couldn't get across. The canoe was on the other side. — Sheriff." This return was actually made by the sheriff of Reynolds county on a subpoena returnable to the Iron County Circuit Court." Our friend in commenting on the clipping says "this is much like an Arkansas sheriff."

One evening about a week after the rumored escape of the fugitives, when I approached the store presided over by "Uncle Davy" Humphreys I saw on the porch a ten-gallon keg. By it stood C. R. Peck, the book-keeper for the firm of Tong & Aubuchon. "What do you suppose is in this?" he asked of me as I came up. "Good red liquor, from its outside appearance," was my answer. "Well, something like that, but with an addition—though I don't know if its flavor is thereby improved," he replied, smiling. "What do you mean?" "You know those two niggers that ran away from — and were said to have crossed into Illinois and made their escape? One of them was killed by his pursuers, and his head is in this keg preserved in alcohol. Do you want to see it?" I told him, "no; I'll sleep just as well 't'wixt I don't have that nigger's head to disturb my dreams. Why has it been preserved and brought back?" "To scare the other niggers about here, and deter them from attempting to run away." I afterward heard that there was some question as to the identity of the head and considerable doubt as to whether it had ever stood upon the shoulders of either of the two fugitives; that it had probably been severed from the body of a slave dead from natural cause and made to do duty in terrorem. Either way, it was an incident well illustrating the "seamy side" of an establishment claimed to have been divinely instituted. But it didn't seem to be particularly seamy in those days—so much as we the creatures of surroundings and custom. A slave was valued at so many dollars, according to physical ability or form, and when you measure flesh and blood with dollars and cents, it can't be considered except as is that of the dumb brute—whether enveloped in white, red, yellow or black cuticle.

Pilot Knob, owing to its iron business, in those days, was a bigger town than either Arcadia or Ironton. The village of the village owned exclusively by the P. K. Iron Co. in its earlier years; but when Ironton was established, the Company laid out a part of its land into town lots and sold them and the new town of Pilot Knob built up rapidly. The railroad from St. Louis had just been completed to that point, and for many years there was the terminus. Business flourished, and the saloons and places of amusement were wide open until after the war. Before the railroad was built, commercial communication with the outside world was maintained by wagon, with Ste. Genevieve as port of entry. It was a forty-two mile rough drive, but somehow they managed to bring in and manufacture and ship out with profit. The iron furnaces burned charcoal, the wood for which lay plentifully almost within their shadows; the ore was taken from the surface well up the mountain—no drifting, no tunneling. When the works were first established a forge was also put up and for some years its huge hammers fashioned blooms from the crude cast iron; but it had ceased operations before my arrival upon the scene. The building and its machinery still remain, and however, as I think it was destroyed by fire while the battle at the fort was raging.

The Pilot Knob railway station was an important one from the year 1857 to 1870. All the goods and merchandise for this section were distributed from that point and hauled to destinations sometimes hundreds of miles into the interior. This made business for all three towns, and times were flourishing. The tougher characters who are known on the coast of prosperous communities, were not lacking, and they often made things lively in other than a business sense. The station agent had his hands full to keep his own. On one occasion he had to "put up" for a missing case mill—stolen bodily from the platform in the night. Its 1200 pounds was no defense against the nerve and muscle of the man who hauled it away. Although the charter under which he bought the road provided for its extension "south from Pilot Knob," Mr. Thos. Allen for a time showed no inclination to observe the injunction, and a great remonstrance went up against him. Finally, however, the work was taken up and pushed to completion; but with the extension Pilot Knob lost its importance and the whole Valley a big slice of business. Then the "kickers" in this vicinity had to compute whether the wisdom they had gained compensated for the sorrow of smaller balances. Nor did the fact that our loss was the gain of a whole lot of other people seem to satisfactorily fill the gap!
